Slimming Seaweed

Seaweed could hold the key to tackling obesity after new research showed it reduced fat uptake by more than 75 per cent. Scientists from Newcastle University discovered that alginate, a natural fibre found in sea kelp, stops the body from absorbing fat better than most anti-obesity treatments currently available over the counter. In a further Japanese study 80 per cent of women taking seaweed reduced their fat tissue.

Oceans of Goodness' Seagreens® food capsules are rich in alginates and have 200 times more iron, 8 times more magnesium and 100 times more iodine than the most nutritious vegetable. As well as regulating weight and metabolism, the capsules remove body toxins and strengthen the immune system.

Seagreens® are the product of sustainable harvesting made from wild seaweed plants north of the Arctic Circle in the cold, clear waters off the Norwegian coast. Seagreens production and processing are certified in Norway and in the UK in accordance with the world's highest biodynamic and organic standards.

The capsules cost £15.95 for 60 (a month's supply) and are available from www.oceansofgoodness.com

Seagreens Mineral Salt

Trying not to over do it over Christmas is always a struggle - but here is a great way to boost both the flavour and health profile of that turkey!

Seagreens, long known for their arctic wrack seaweed condiments and supplements, have now joined forces with Cornish Sea Salt, 'the only British salt producer returning sea water back to the ocean as seawater, not distilled which can adversely affect local salinity' - to create a condiment which is 50% sea salt and 50% seaweed! The result is a good salty flavour, enhanced by the more complex flavours of the seaweed, with 50% less blood-pressure-raising sodium chloride than normal salt and with a fantastic nutritional profile!! What more could you want!!

The Mineral Salt costs £3.50 for 100g from www.oceansofgoodness.co.uk and some retailers or health food stores.
